Indiana State Bar Association adds FileEngine® Server Appliance as Member Benefit

Members receive $1,000 discount while keeping data safe.

September 15, 2007, Indianapolis, Ind. –The Indiana State Bar Association (ISBA) announced today that it has selected FileEngine as the file server appliance it recommends to its members. ISBA members receive a $1,000 discount off the most popular FileEngine model designed for offices with under 10 PCs and save more on systems designed for larger firms.

Susan Jacobs, Associate Executive Director of the ISBA, said, “We are pleased to offer our members this important tool at an attractive discount. We have never partnered with a technology provider before. We didn't want to support one over another, but FileEngine is unique. ISBA members who have been considering a server can now choose FileEngine with confidence.”

FileEngine is different. Traditionally, servers sold by local technology service providers are assembled from hardware, software and services sourced from multiple vendors. While a custom-engineered solution may sound good, it results in a system that is different for every customer; each depends on the skill (and memory) of the individual technician for support and maintenance. Compared to FileEngine, this approach is outdated, expensive and risky. FileEngine offers an integrated, quality-controlled system that is backed-up, monitored and maintained remotely. FileEngine also includes service and support in the monthly lease price. There are no upfront costs and no repair bills.

Another FileEngine advantage is six levels of backup, including offsite storage that is included at no extra cost. Law firms have an absolute duty to protect their work product, e-mail, documents, spreadsheets and other data stored on their computers. A combination of innovation and traditional technology makes FileEngine a cost-effective solution for businesses that must keep data safe.

“The ISBA seeks to provide quality, high-value services to the practicing lawyers of Indiana. With FileEngine, we believe we have found another of these opportunities—this time providing an innovative and cost-effective IT solution that will benefit small, medium and large law practices alike,” said Bill Jonas, Vice President of the ISBA Board of Governors.

Kim Brand, CEO of Server Partners, the Indianapolis-based company that developed and manufactures FileEngine, added, “Our partnership with the ISBA is the first in the country. I believe that by using FileEngine more law firms will enjoy technology advantages previously reserved for large firms. Our goal is to make technology simple, reliable and affordable for every small business.”

The first FileEngine was installed in 1999 at the Waples & Hanger law firm in Indianapolis. Today, schools, not-for-profits, engineering companies and consulting firms depend on FileEngine to organize, share and protect critical business information. FileEngine delivers a “No Worries” IT solution for less than $8/day.
